DAVID M. MANNINO III, MD

Chair

The Department of Occupational Medicine and Environmental Health provides consultation in the areas of occupational health and environment-related health problems. We evaluate and manage anticipated health problems, and identify occupational, lifestyle hazards and environment-related disorders. We emphasize individual health maintenance in our approach to the promotion of good health and assist companies in identification of workplace health hazards, cost-effective preventive health programs and fringe benefit packages for employees. Our clinical faculty provides services at UK HealthCare at Turfland and is available for employer sponsored job-site evaluations for industrial and agricultural work environments.

SPECIALIZING IN EVALUATIONS FOR:

- Drug screening
- Individual wellness prescriptions
- International travel and immunizations
- Occupation-related illness or injury including black lung, hazardous exposure, workers' compensation and return to work
- OSHA compliance/hazardous exposure program
- US FAA and DOT certified examinations by physician-pilot
- Workplace assessments and healthy worksite program development
- Workplace or environmental exposures to chemicals and other toxins including exotic insects
